

Pastor Sel Harris

Sel Harris was born in Charlottesville VA and grew up in Blackstone VA. His formal education includes an undergraduate degree from Hampden-Sydney College in Virginia as well as graduate degrees from Union Theological Seminary in Virginia and the University of St. Andrews in St. Andrews, Scotland.

In addition to serving churches in Virginia and Texas, he has served on the faculty at Patrick Henry Community College in Martinsville VA as well as Austin Presbyterian Theological Seminary in Austin TX.

A leader in the work of Presbytery, he is currently the Vice-Moderator of the Presbytery of Eastern Virginia and will serve as its Moderator in 2010.

His Continuing Education equips him to be a leader in “growing churches.” A key to a growing, healthy church is ongoing Elder training.

Sel loves baseball and an occasional game of golf.
